

ARRAN MALT IN LITERATURE!

We had a lovely message today from Arran friend Christine Bonvin who is based in Switzerland and an accomplished author. Christine got in touch with us last year to ask our permission for her to include our Single Malts in her brand new book, being launched this year. We were, of course, delighted to see our Distillery and Single Malt feature in a literary context and were delighted to give her the green light to go ahead and weave her story in and around Lochranza.

Today's message from Christine was to keep us updated and share her progress - her book launch took place yesterday in Switzerland and she was delighted to take a few photographs with her work and our whisky alongside one another! Here is a little taste of what the story is all about:

The book is entitled 'Culinary Olympics' and is a Crime Thriller with a unique foodie twist. Christine summarises for us:

"The book is set around the Culinary Olympics taking place in Edinburgh in Scotland. The intrigue surrounds the Swiss national Team who represent Switzerland at this international event. During the contest, one of the chefs disappears. Charlotte, an elderly lady, accompanying the team as photographer begins searching for him. Meanwhile, her husband Cédéric, the team's Logistics Manager finds himself having to help out in the kitchen. Different clues lead Charlotte to Isle of Arran Distillery where the intrigue develops...! In every chapter you will find a recipe of a dish. For example : Dundee Cake, Shepherd's Pie or whisky based recipes."

We would like to congratulate Christine on her book launch and thanks go to her for keeping us up to date with the progress of her work. The novel is written in German and you can purchase it from www.bol.de, www.thaia.de, www.buch.ch and www.weltbild.ch.
